

Pad Performance over temperature range

With rare exceptions, a brake pad with a linear coefficient of Friction (CoF) is better. A "linear" pad keeps the brake bias balanced front to rear regardless of temperature variation.

Coefficient of Friction - Ratio between the force necessary to move one surface over another and the pressure between the two surfaces.

